Respect, Love, and Education Through Christ

First graders went back into time to learn about the first art that we know of...cave art! These cave artists explored the art made in the caves of Lascaux, France, while wearing head lamps that they made. They worked in the media of pastel to create animals such as horses, cattle, rhinos, fox, deer, bulls, and reptiles just like the cave artists made. Ask the first graders what cave painters used as paint 20,000 years ago and they will be able to tell you how they made each color and what they used to paint with. Students created animals and symbols with pastels on their "rock-like" art work. They drew their animals to render action and movement and blended pastels together to create a stylized cave drawing. The students used paint to accent their art
